How to reference your assignment using APA

Books

What is referencing?

Referencing is a system used at colleges and universities to let anyone reading your assignments know exactly where you found your information.

To reference your assignment correctly you will need to do two things:

- Give a citation in your assignment
- Create a reference list at the end of the assignment

Citations in your assignment

A citation is a piece of writing in your assignment that shows who wrote or is responsible for the idea, words or image you are using. Each citation ‘cites’, or points to, a reference in your reference list. Citations go in brackets and should be written in your assignment with the quotation. They need to include:

- the surnames of all the authors/editors (check referencing.port.ac.uk for more than 3 authors), or the full name of the organisation if there are no individual authors/editors
- the year of publication of the edition you are using (ignore any reprint dates)
- the page number(s) of the quotation

When you quote from another writer there are two types of quotation.

A direct quotation uses the writer’s exact words.
An indirect quotation is when you rewrite or paraphrase the writer’s words in your own words.
You need to give a citation and a reference for both types of quotation.

Example of a direct quotation

Write the quotation in quotation marks.

“Writing is not the same as thinking out loud” (Peck & Coyle, 2005, p. 52).
OR
According to Peck and Coyle “writing is not the same as thinking out loud” (2005, p. 52).

Example of an indirect quotation

Peck and Coyle (2005, p. 52) emphasize that in written work you have the opportunity to improve your presentation by re-evaluating and rewriting your first thoughts.
OR
In written work you have the opportunity to improve your presentation by re-evaluating and rewriting your first thoughts (Peck & Coyle, 2005, p. 52).

Other ways of writing indirect quotations include

According to Peck and Coyle (2005, p. 52) …
Research by Peck and Coyle (2005, p. 52) found that …

Reference list at the end of the assignment

The reference you write in your reference list will give all the details of the source where you read the original quotation. It should be one alphabetical list and include references to all types of resource used. Begin each reference with the surname of the author/editor or the organisation name which you used to begin the citation.

[Adapted from referencing.port.ac.uk by Chichester College Library September 2016]
The additional details you will need to write this list can usually be found on the front and back of the title page. These are:
- initials of authors
- title of book (in full, including any subtitle)
- edition (if it is not the first edition)
- place of publication (a town or city, not a county or country)
- publisher (not the printer or typesetter)

The reference is written like this. Note the punctuation and that the title is in italics or if you are writing by hand then the title is underlined.

Author surname, Initials., Author2 surname, Initials., & Author3 surname, Initials. (year). Title of book (Edition if later than first, e.g. 3rd ed.). Place of publication: Publisher.

(List up to seven authors in the reference. For eight or more authors, include the first six authors' names, then insert an ellipsis ( . . . ), and add the last author's name).

Example of a reference

Reference list or bibliography?

Some tutors also ask for a bibliography. This is formatted in the same way as the reference list and should also include any relevant sources which you have consulted but not quoted. The reference list should only include sources you have read yourself and quoted in your assignment.

Secondary referencing - What if I haven’t read the original source?

Much of your research at college will be done using textbooks. The authors of these books will often quote or discuss ideas from the key writers on the topic they are presenting.

If you have not read the original source you do not need to give details of the original in your reference list/bibliography. You should reference the source you have actually read.

You need to cite both sources, the original author and date and the source where you found it.

Example of secondary citation:

“a warm, intimate and continuous relationship with his mother”

This is a quote from John Bowlby found on page 59 of a psychology textbook by Cardwell, Clark and Meldrum published in 2004. It is cited by the authors of the book as coming from an original source published in 1953.

Citation for both sources

... “a warm, intimate and continuous relationship with his mother” (Bowlby, 1953, cited by Cardwell, Clark & Meldrum, 2004, p. 59) ...

Reference for the book you actually read

Further help

Please ask in the College library for help with referencing. See additional handouts for how to reference webpages and journal articles and a sample reference list. The University of Portsmouth Library website http://referencing.port.ac.uk has an excellent interactive tool to help you to reference books and other materials in your research. Select APA 6th edition.